An Interview with Mrs B

Tips crafted by a Primary Teacher for educators

ABOUT

Hi everyone!
My name is Victoria
(also known as Mrs B).

I'm a Primary School Teacher and I will be sharing creative activities to try out with your class, valuable insights and tips for Teachers.

I have a passion for working with children and love watching how they learn. My class will tell you I am not afraid to dress up as characters or read books in different voices!

In this edition of our Exercise Book magazine I will be sharing my tips on how to maximise the use of your Exercise Books.

I often stick help sheets at the front of Exercise Books. These can be tailored to pupil's needs:

- Mind maps
- Vocabulary
- Number bonds
- Conjunctions and openers
- Units of measurement

See page six for my help sheets.

QUESTION TIME

What is the best thing about being a teacher?

Working with children who are full of energy and have such a positive outlook on life!

What are your 5 favourite products?

Stickers! I work in EYFS and so couldn't be without these! My BIC 4 as the colours are great for different tasks! Lego as it is so versatile. My tuff tray as I love to see the children explore! A5 Art books to help see the detail in children's drawings improve across the year.

If you weren't a teacher what would you be?

A childminder - I couldn't imagine not working with children!

Who do you go to for advice?

My colleagues, SLT, SENCO and teachers online via social media!

What have you enjoyed most about working with Herts FullStop?

Exploring my creativity and sharing ideas. I have enjoyed researching and exploring different parts of the curriculum, which has really helped me as a teacher.

What funny stories can you share?

In response to me asking "Why do we use umbrellas?" one of my students replied "Well apparently to stop us getting wet!" With an unimpressed look he went onto to say "They don't work as I always still seem to get wet!"

What has aided your wellbeing this year?

My colleagues! Couldn't have got through it all without them.

What is your favourite past time?

Being outside, walking or cycling and spending time with family and friends.

How does your school stay eco-focused?

We have eco ambassadors and make a conscious effort to recycle and reduce waste. I love anything that is recycled!

What are your 3 favourite subjects?

I have always loved teaching Maths as I find the children get really excited when they can solve a maths problem. Science because I love that it is hands on and RE as I love the discussions you can have in class!

Vocabulary

A good vocabulary is one of the most important tools in a child's education.

More so than just their academic success, the size of a child's vocabulary has been shown to correlate with their life chances. It is imperative that as teacher's we ensure we provide a number of opportunities in which children can improve and expand their vocabulary.

New Words and Definitions Use either the beginning or the back of their exercise books, across all subjects, to store new words that they come across during their lessons and also the word's definition. This may be a dictionary definition or a definition that aids the child in their memory of the word, for example, through linking the word to a character in a book.

Synonyms and Antonyms You may also wish to provide space for the child to add synonyms and antonyms, which can be added to at any point throughout the year. By dedicating a section of a child's exercise book to storing vocabulary, you are helping them to increase the breadth of their lexicon, which in turn will help them in their education. This method also allows children to gain independence in their work as they can refer to the vocabulary they have stored to help them in their future learning.

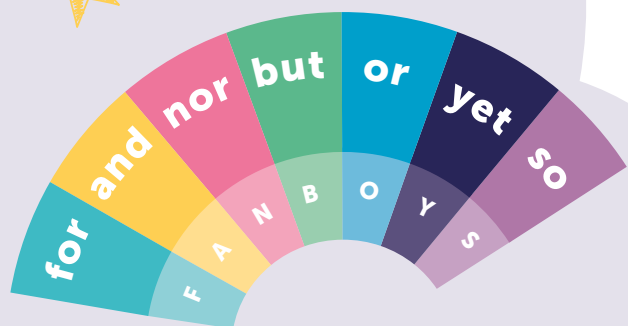

Conjunctions and Openers

A great way for children to improve their writing is using conjunctions and openers.

Increase Confidence Conjunctions can help the children to smoothly link their ideas within their writing, whilst openers can allow children to create a powerful start to their sentences. These are very useful tools which not only allow for children to improve their work, but also helps to boost their confidence in their writing ability.

English Book Personalisation Although conjunctions and openers are often displayed within the classroom, these displays are not always accessible to all, depending on where children are sat. Instead, it is much more beneficial to include a list of conjunctions and openers into children's English exercise books for each child to easily access. This also allows for personalisation, depending on the child, making the resource more user friendly. For the conjunctions section, break this down into co-ordinating conjunctions and subordinate conjunctions, with an explanation on what defines each section. This will help the children in developing their grammatical knowledge.

Develop Ownership As well as, having a list of pre-printed openers, allow room for children to add to these lists throughout the year, with new words that they come across. This allows the children to develop ownership over the lists and will also encourage them to use it more frequently.

Paste these worksheets into Exercise Books

Number bonds

Number bonds are an important part in the foundation of a child's mathematical ability.

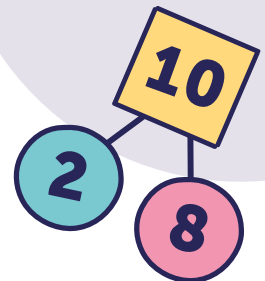

Understanding The Basics Even right at the beginning, in Early Years, children are now expected to automatically recall number bonds without rhyme or counting. Having a solid understanding of number bonds is so important because being able to use these simple mathematical patterns underpins so many of the mathematical problems they will tackle during their time at school, such as, long addition and using decimals.

Maths Book Personalisation Ensure you include a page on number bonds in each child's maths book, focusing on different numbers depending on the year group. The number bonds included within a child's exercise book can also be changed to suit the individual pupil. You may wish to include these in the form of simple addition, part-whole models or bar addition models, or even perhaps a variety of all.

Memory Recall Having this resource for the children to access will give them confidence and independence when tackling their maths problems. Also, as a child becomes more familiar with this resource and refers to it frequently, this will help to embed the number bonds within their memory, further helping to improve their mathematical ability.

Units of Measurement

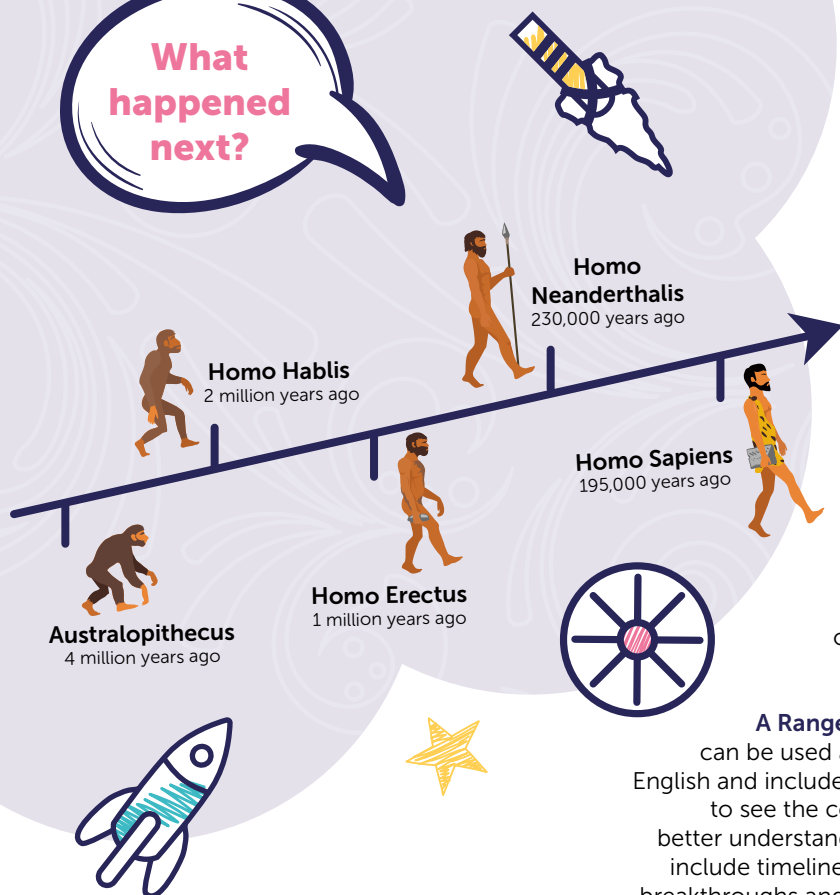

Having a good understanding of units of measurement is not only key to helping a child in their mathematical ability, it is also an important life skill to learn.

Metric and Imperial Systems Even as adults we can become confused between the metric and imperial systems of units and struggle to convert from one to another. Therefore, providing pupils with a solid understanding of the wide range of units of measurements is an essential part of the curriculum. To help ensure your pupils gain this understanding, include units of measurement inserts into Maths and Science exercise books. These can include a variety of measurements ranging from: mass, length, time, temperature and capacity, in both the metric and imperial systems. This resource should also include conversions between both systems, helping to improve the children's knowledge of each unit of measurement.

Memory Recall Depending on the year group or child you may also wish to include imagery to go alongside these units, for example, a thermometer for temperature or a filled jug for capacity to further support the child's understanding. Pupils can then refer to this resource whenever they need until the information becomes embedded in their memory.

Timelines

What happened next?

Developing a secure chronological understanding is essential within the history curriculum.

Improve Chronological Awareness

As historical topics aren't always studied in order this can sometimes cause confusion in the children, creating a struggle in piecing together the historical knowledge they have been taught. Having timelines within their exercise book, for them to reference can make a huge impact on helping children to improve their chronological awareness.

Personalisation

You may choose to include a pre-printed timeline or a blank one for children to add to throughout the year, depending on the child or year group. This will help the children to make better sense of the information they have learnt allowing them to see links between significant events and periods of time.

A Range of Subjects

Timelines are not only useful in history but can be used across a range of subjects. You may wish to use them in English and include significant texts and authors. This will help the children to see the context in which texts are written, helping them to gain a better understanding of influences in the literature. You may also wish to include timelines in Science, focusing on significant scientists, scientific breakthroughs and discoveries. Again, this helps children to see the bigger picture in which these significant events occurred.

Mind Mapping

Mind mapping is an excellent technique to help children organise and link ideas, building a better understanding of the subject matter.

Independence Provide your pupils with a plain exercise book to use as a mind mapping book to encourage ownership and independence in collating and using the information they have been taught. Each page can be used to create an individual mind map with a focus on a central theme, depending upon the topic being studied. Children can then add a variety of information to their mind map such as significant dates, significant people, links to previous topics covered, links to literature etc. This helps the children to think deeper and more broadly around the topic they are currently studying.

Personalisation Children can also use their own personalisation in how they create their mind map, for example, one pupil may find the use of different colours helps them and another may find the use of mini drawings aids them in their learning.

Reflection Children can use these books to refer to previous content they have learnt and also add to them as they learn more throughout the academic year. This will help them to see the links between the different topics they have covered, allowing for continuity in their learning.

In the last decade, almost 10,000 rhinos have been poached.

When you buy a Rhino Stationery product, you're supporting efforts to protect rhinos, so that these wonderful and unique animals can thrive in the wild.

Save the Rhino's work

2020

Thanks to donors including Rhino Stationery, Save the Rhino sends out more than £2.5 million to conservation projects in Africa and Asia. The total number of rhinos poached reduces by more than 50% since the peak of the poaching crisis in 2014.

2019

The South Western black rhino grows by more than 11% since 2012, becoming less at risk of extinction.

2018

Save the Rhino joins the Sumatran Rhino Rescue project, an international alliance of organisations working together to save the Sumatran rhino from extinction.

2012

Save the Rhino makes its first grant to reduce demand for illegal rhino horn in Vietnam.

2008

Rhino poaching begins to increase across Africa.

2005-6

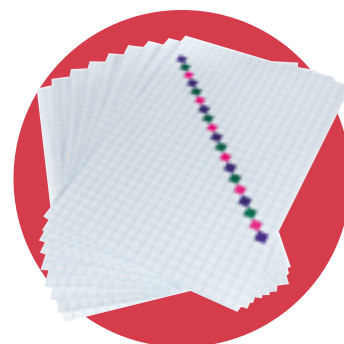

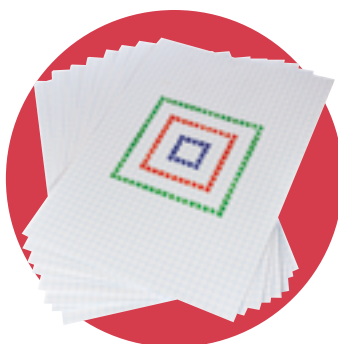

European zoos raise €660,000 for rhinos via the EAZA 'Save the Rhinos' campaign.

1994

Save the Rhino International registers as a charity in the UK (charity number: 1035072).

Developing representation in mathematics to support deep conceptual understanding is a crucial aspect of learning. Pictorial representations are a key part of this. These pupil exercise books have been created in conjunction with the Herts for Learning Mathematics Team. They provide space for pupils to develop their pictures, diagrams, jottings and formal methods alongside each other. This will support pupils to strengthen the connections between the various representations.
